

Coming soon - September 2007

The Economist Historical Archive 1843-2000

A key witness to the history of economics and international politics

The Economist and Thomson Learning are pleased to announce that the complete facsimile run of The Economist from 1843 to 2000, will be available online in 2007, with editorial, advertising and tabular matter fully searchable.

Founded in 1843 to campaign for free trade, The Economist's principles and methods remain just as relevant today. Objective, written anonymously and editorially independent, it is renowned for its consistent approach to internationalism and championing of minimal interference by governments in political and government affairs.

Researchers, academics and students can now access high-quality primary sources, enabling them to facilitate comparisons of economic trends across continents and centuries. This is the definite resource for cutting-edge ideas and intelligent analysis in an easily digested form.

What is covered in EHA?

- Cover to cover from 1843 to 2000
- News, analysis, commentary, editorials, statistics, demographics, letters to the editor, obituaries, and historical photographs
- Special surveys and supplements on Countries and Industries
- Renowned sections including 'Science and Technology'
- Classified and display advertising profiling major companies, job opportunities etc

Features

- Detailed topic search, and hit-term highlighting
- Searchable 'covers gallery'
- Searchable financial data. Key economic indicators post-1983 are available in exportable format

Highly intelligent discussion is The Economist's contribution to Britain and to journalism'.

Time, 7 December 1959

For further information, or to request a free trial please visit www.galeuk.com/economist or email tlemea.enquiries@thomson.com